RIVER

The rivers of Europe have long wine making traditions that stretch back centuries. These ancient highways have long been arteries for moving not only goods but ideas and methods, and this is especially true of wine making. Texture, fruit and elegance combine to produce textbook wines from classic regions, worthy of their stellar reputation.

HILLS + PLAINS

There is no uniform style of wines among the difficult and changing climate conditions of the central hills and plains. The cheaper land has attracted a pioneering group of young winemakers, eagar to experiement and express the individuality of their regions and themselves. Traditional grape varieties take on new identities, and traditional methods are repurposed to produce unique expressions of place and self.

IRISH WINEMAKERS

Ireland might not be the first country that springs to mind when we talk about wine, but a long history of Irish emigrants and their decendants have made excellent wine throughout the new and old world. Below we focus on the current generation of Irish people making wine across Europe, from Slovenia to the UK.

BURGUNDY

No place is a better show case of terroir than Burgundy. Synonymous with elegance and finesse, if you're looking for that extra special bottle, there's nothing quite like 'white burg'. Citrus and stone fruit, bracing minerality, buttery complexity; all are hallmarks of the region. Along with the unbiqutous Chardonnay, Aligoté is gaining in reputation once again, and in the hands of the right wine maker can make wines with just as much character and enjoyment.

FROM THE CELLAR

90% of wine is meant to be consumed within a year, and 99% within five years. The remaining 1% however, can develop over time, resulting in unique, complex flavors, impossible to replicate in any other way. Below are a selection of bottles, 5 years old and older, that certainly caused us to pause and think. Be aware however, that aging wine can be unpredicatable, and older wines are not necessarily better, just different. If you're unsure, please let us know what you're looking for and we would be hap py to assist.
